

FRITSE PARK - INDIAN MOUND RECONSTRUCTION

A SENSE OF PLACE — REBUILDING THE PAST

Once upon a time, an Indian mound sat where the trestle trail now runs through. The mound was removed when railroad tracks were installed in 1863. Now a group of local archaeologists and historians would like to build a replica of the Indian Mound north of the Trestle Trail.

Commissioned painting by James Otto Lewis of 1827 Treaty at Little Lake Butte des Morts
(Note that the flagstaff stands on the mound)

The reconstruction project will consist of:

- 8 foot mound replica reconstruction,
- Educational information board,
- Brick paver plaza, and
- Site restoration.
